Statement of the Church Leaders' Group (Ireland) on the new Legacy Framework proposals:

Recognising that these are detailed and complex proposals, the Group stated:

"We welcome the fact that substantial proposals on how to deal with the legacy of the past in Northern Ireland have been issued today. We urge that the Framework documents be closely considered by all who have an interest in how justice and truth can best be served. Above all, we owe it to the victims and survivors to ensure that their needs are met with compassion and thoroughness. It is noteworthy that the Legacy Framework is the result of cooperation between the Government of the United Kingdom and the Government of Ireland and will require legislation in both jurisdictions for it to be put into effect. Just as importantly, it will need the continued cooperation and good will of both Governments, and of all of us, to carry it forward. "Like other groups in wider society, we will examine and consider the Framework in greater detail over the weeks ahead, together, and in our individual denominations. In doing so we will continue to support and pray for all victims and survivors who have waited for decades with great dignity and patience for helpful structures to be put in place.

"Addressing the legacy of the past remains a complex, yet vital, responsibility for all of us on these islands. While no framework or legislation will by itself achieve reconciliation, it can open the path to ongoing restoration of relationships and building of trust." The Church Leaders' Group comprises:

- Most Revd Eamon Martin, Catholic Archbishop of Armagh and Primate of All Ireland
- Most Revd John McDowell, Church of Ireland Archbishop of Armagh and Primate of All Ireland
- Rt Revd Dr Trevor Gribben, Moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Ireland
- Revd Alan Wardlow, President of the Methodist Church in Ireland
- Rt Revd Sarah Groves, President of the Irish Council of Churches
